Kenya Trade Figures

- Market value (Beauty & Personal Care): In 2025, Kenya's beauty & personal care market is estimated at about USD 2.44 billion and is expected to grow at roughly ~5% CAGR through 2030. This sector includes cosmetics, skincare, personal care, hair-care, wellness products, spa & wellness services, and supplemental health products.
- ▶ Rising urbanization and disposable income, especially among middle-class consumers.
- ▶ Increasing health consciousness and demand for organic/natural products.
- ▶ Growth in online retail and modern retail distribution channels.
- ▶ Expansion of wellness services (spa, fitness, aesthetic clinics), though data often focuses more on product segments.

Cosmetic Market Kenya Statistics

- Beauty products and skincare imports into Kenya have been increasing significantly, with import volumes and values rising consistently – in 2023 imports reached peaks, and growth is expected to continue. Kenya is also becoming an East African hub for beauty product distribution due to its strategic position in regional trade.
- Kenyan beauty and skincare exports are relatively modest but show strong regional demand Share Percentage:- Uganda - 33%, Rwanda - 22%, Tanzania - 22%, France - 6%, South Sudan - 5.8%, Burundi, Somalia, Djibouti- Smaller Share
- 2024 trade figures specifically for India exports of essential oils, perfumes, cosmetics and toiletries to Kenya were about US$15.6 million across categories – which indicates some participation but not top ranking.

Why Exhibit?

A valuable international exhibition for beauty, cosmetics and hair products

As the largest industry meeting point in Africa, Beauty Show East Africa is the region's one of the most important international exhibition for beauty, cosmetics, and hair care products. Beauty Show offers a platform for industry professionals from Kenya and abroad to create new business and partnership opportunities.
